Intern Position:

Undergraduate Intern for the Corpus and Technology Enhanced Language Learning Research Lab
Term: Spring Semester, 2019

Description:

The undergraduate intern for the Corpus and TELL research lab will participate in an inter-institutional initiative between Purdue University and the University of Arizona to enhance the teaching of writing, particularly to international students. The intern will learn about and participate in the process of developing the Corpus and Repository of Writing (Crow), a collection of texts used for qualitative and quantitative research on writing and the development of pedagogical materials for instructors of writing. In addition, the intern will contribute to the development of our blog and online interface. The intern will participate in discussions about data collection, research, and outreach to teachers as well as presentations to students and faculty. The intern may also be asked to contribute to grant writing and articles for publication. Information about the Crow project can be found at http://writecrow.org
This is an excellent opportunity for a student who is interested in technical and professional writing, language teaching, the teaching of writing, and/or research in the humanities and social sciences.

Requirements:

- 8 hours of available work time per week, to be conducted in the Corpus and TELL research lab (ML 371)
- Attention to detail and strong communication skills.
- Willingness to learn new technology and online platforms.

Contact:
Questions about the position may be addressed to Dr. Shelley Staples at slstaples@arizona.edu.